President Kustra gestures to the oudience during his installation address.

Dr. Kustra takes the oath of office from Joseph E. Lombert, chief justice, Supreme Court of Kentucky.

In his installation address on Oct.

2, 1998, Eastern Kentucky
University's ninth president, Dr. Bob Kustra, pledged the University to a new era of excellence and created a new excitement on campus.

Excerpts from his speech are presented over the next few pages.

"Today we celebrate the past... and pledge ourselves to a new era of excellence. Let us reflect on our mission as a teaching institution, the importance of the liberal arts, and the need for excellence in order to compete in the 21st Century."

"Just listen carefully to what our alumni say when they reflect on their academic experience. It is here among fond recollections of a youth well spent that you will learn the very definition of Eastern Kentucky University."

"We have to move from a facultyteaching focus to a student-learning focus. Students learn best when in the process of discovery."

"Let's not confine our teaching to the classroom. Ours is the job of teaching beyond the walls of the classroom.

Ours is the job of teaching the habits of a good life. Ours is the job of teaching an appreciation of a music concert, of an art exhibit, of a guest lecture and of social activities that do not center around the use of alcohol."

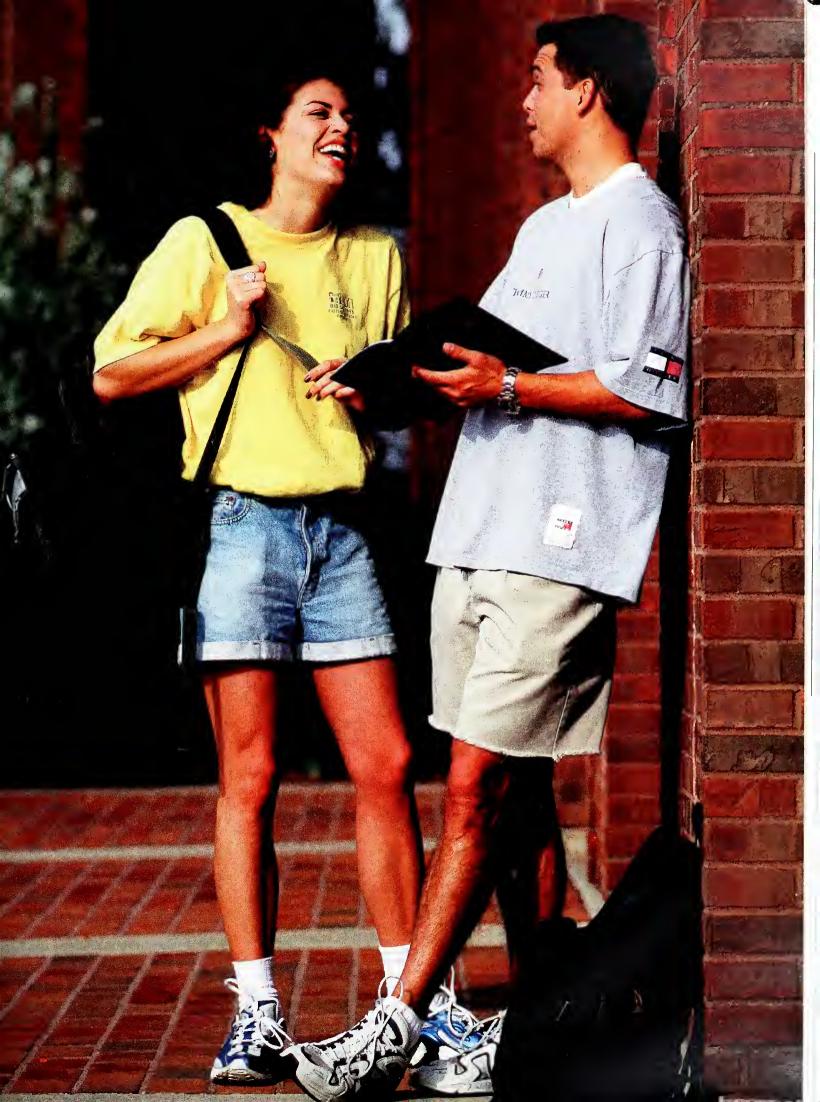

"The most effective learning will take place on a campus where there is a sense of community among learners and teachers."

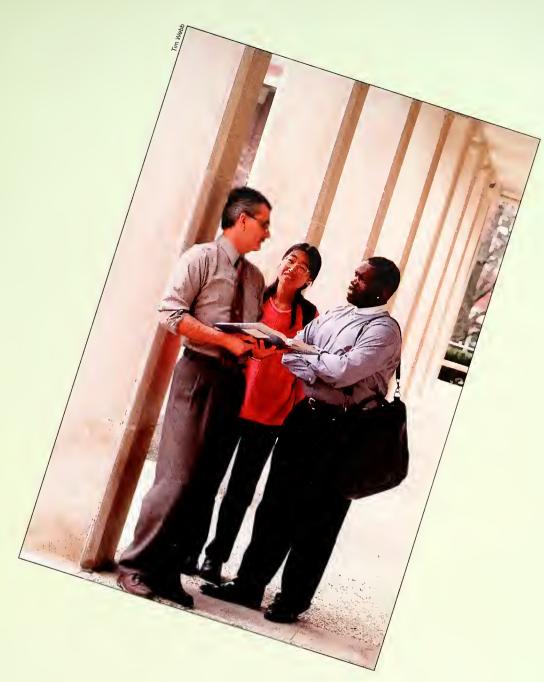

"The very best preparation for making a living is learning the art of writing clearly and persuasively, reasoning qualitatively and quantitatively, and thinking critically."

"As we approach the millennium, we are in the midst of another sea of change in the delivery of postsecondary education in America. Gone are the days when public higher education enjoyed a virtual monopoly and the university dictated the terms of the contract between school and student."

"The ability of EKU to compete in the new marketplace, attract students academically fit for study, and graduate those students with bright prospects for jobs and careers is dependent not only on teaching, but also on a system of student services characterized by excellence."

The newly refurbished University Building is the oldest building on compus.

"We must place a high priority on the assessment of outcomes. It is not enough to wave goodbye on graduation day and wish our graduates well. We must follow up with questions that judge our effectiveness and theirs."

Alumni Come Back Home

Eastern is blessed to have so many alumni and friends in the area, and many return to campus each fall for Homecoming.

With the cooperation of Mother Nature, Homecoming '98 proved to be another big hit as graduates and townsfolk alike enjoyed a fall weekend full of floats, football, fellowship and fun.

The celebration began with a Homecoming Run and Parade down the traditional Lancaster Avenue route.

The largest tailgate party on campus, the Colonel Country Fair, followed in the Alumni Coliseum Parking Lot. The fair featured concessions, carnival booths, entertainment and get-togethers for various departments and organizations.

The only downer for the weekend was that the Colonels lost their Homecoming match with Murray State, 28-21.

At halftime, Sarrah Wrenn (see pages 28-29) was crowned Homecoming Queen.

First Weekend

Initiative Rebuilds Campus Culture

Since he arrived on the Eastern campus in the summer of 1998, President Bob Kustra has emphasized the importance of rebuilding a "campus culture."

One way to accomplish that, he suggested, would be an attractive mix of educational and entertaining weekend programs and activities for the entire campus community and more accessible University services for students who choose to stay on campus.

First Weekend, which debuted in March and was repeated in April, was an initial effort to address a concern shared by many colleges and universities: a decline in activities and student participation on weekends.

A First Weekend Committee composed of students, faculty and staff and co-chaired by Kathy Kustra, wife of the president, and Josh Bleidt, a junior from Louisville, planned a variety of activities for the weekends of March 5-6 and April 16-18.

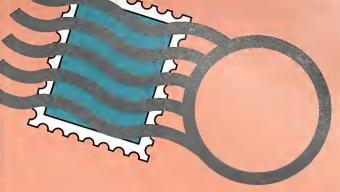

The student response was positive.

"Students told me that they had so much fun at the First Weekend in March that they planned on participating in April, too," Bleidt said. "We weren't quite sure what to expect the first time around, but it went much better than I anticipated."

First Weekend activities included: concerts by Goodie Mob and Grammy Award-winner Barbara Bailey Hutchison, a ballroom dance, high-tech thrill rides, laser tag games, fantasy photos, psychic fair, free bowling and billiards and Casino Night.

eshman Picnic Draws Big Frowd to President's Home

Maybe it was the nice August evening weather.

Maybe it was the aroma of various (and free) culinary delights that wafted across campus.

Maybe it was a chance to meet someone of the opposite sex.

Or the chance to meet and talk with new EKU President Bob Kustra, comfortably clad in jeans.

Whatever the reason -- and it was probably a combination of all those -- the turnout for the annual Freshman Picnic in August was the best in a number of years.

One new wrinkle to this year's event was the presence of University vice presidents, who served food to the freshmen.

Another was the pizza, catered by Papa John's of Richmond.

The picnic is a campus tradition to welcome freshmen to campus and give them a chance to meet the University president and their classmates.

Run for Literacy

Robinson: Need for Education Transcends Skin Color

"The fact that a mind is a terrible thing to waste applies to everyone," said Greg Robinson. "It transcends ethnicity."

That's why the junior English major was busy in the spring months preparing for a solo 750-mile run down Interstate 75 from his hometown of Detroit, Mich., to Atlanta. His "Run for Literacy" was to raise funds for the United Negro College Fund and United Way.

More importantly, the 29-year-old Robinson said he hoped to raise awareness for the need for education.

"Education," he said, "is the assurance of a better tomorrow. Without it, where are we?"

Robinson, whose younger brother, Whitney, is a standout guard for the Colonel basketball team, has spent the past several years as chief assistant to the president of the Detroit City Council. He joined his brother at Eastern in the fall and plans after graduation to enter law school and then politics.

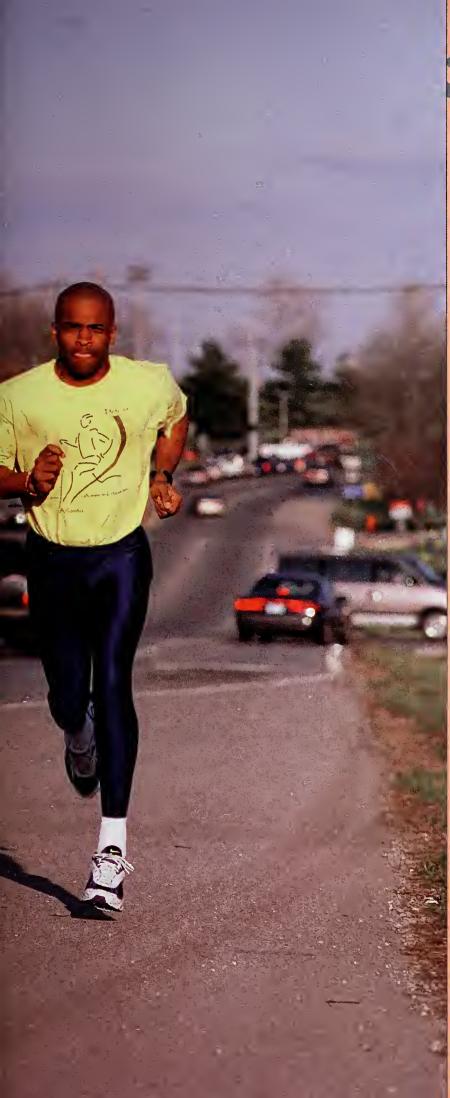

Since August 1998, Robinson prepared for his event by running 20 miles a day on campus and city streets. He planned to break his fund-raising run into increments of 20-35 miles a day, depending on weather and other factors. He planned to begin the run May 17 and finish in late June.

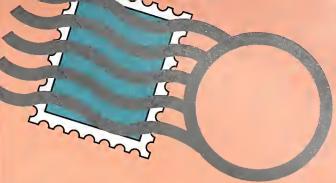

Prior to the run, he secured financial support from Chrysler, Nike, Sam's Club and Rotary International, among others.

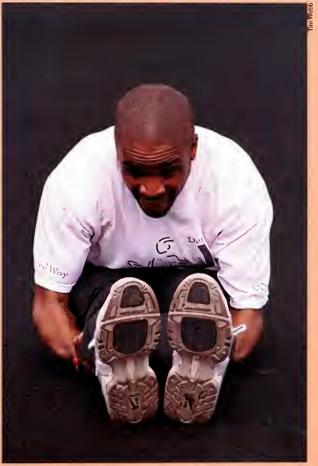

Right: For most of the 1998-99 school year, Robinson was a familiar sight to local motorists. Below: Robinson pauses atop an 1-75 overpass. The EKU lunior was planning a run down 1-75 from Detroit to Atlanta, a distance of 750 miles.

Vinning Combination

Independence + Desire + Intelligence = Travis Bibb

More than 22 years ago, Travis Gibb and his brother were playing in an old storage shed when they stumbled upon some blasting caps and nitroglycerin. Only 10 years old, Gibb decided to shoot a BB gun into a hole in one of the caps.

"It was literally like a bomb," he said. Gibb was left blind from the explosion. He was down, but certainly not out. At 32 now, Gibb walks "The Campus Beautiful" led by a walking stick and the desire to lead a productive life.

"I wanted to get some skills," he said. "For somebody with a disability - I guess you would call it - you need to make up for it."

Gibb, who came to Eastern last semester, said his decision was influenced a lot by his father and friends. He is taking four classes this semester, and came to Eastern from Solano Community College in California.

Gibb, a computer science major, doesn't know exactly what he wants to do upon graduating, but said he wants to do something in programming.

"I always liked science," Gibb said. "I like things that are scientific, and there are a lot of things that I don't know about."

When Gibb came to Eastern, it didn't take him long to learn his way around, he said.

"I just do it by memorization," Gibb said. "It's pretty easy. I just look for landmarks just like sighted people do.

"That's how a seeing-eye dog does it, and I just thought that if I can't do that, then I am dumber than a dog," he said.

Although Gibb appreciates people offering help around campus, he said he doesn't like it when they treat him like anything other than normal.

"I get a little peeved sometimes when people elect themselves to help me," he said. "My definition of help is when I ask someone for help.

"Most of the time I tell them I don't need help and, if I did they are probably not qualified to help me. If I did need help then we'd both be in trouble."

That independence, courage and desire to succeed brought Gibb to Eastern, and he plans to stay here until he graduates, he said.

"I just want to fulfill my purpose in life – whatever that is," he said.

Marks of Disting

Tattoos, Piercings Leave Student Body Decorated

Once tattoos and body piercing were distinctive marks of drunken sailors and itinerant circus workers. They sent a strong message - and it wasn't positive.

Now, both tattoos and body piercing are making their "marks" on EKU's campus. Whether this phenomena is merely a short-lived trend remains to be seen. However, one thing is clear: the reasons behind the body art are as interesting as the placements and designs.

"Ghostwriter," a Richmond tattoo artist at Tattoos Down Under, denies that tattoos are atrend, noting, "It's been here for thousands of years." He became interested after air-brushing T-shirts when he was younger. Ghostwriter says body piercing is somewhat more popular than tattoos right now, but believes it is a trend that will fade out with time. Seventy-five percent of his clientele are women who request designs such as dolphins, butterflies and tribal suns, primarily on their arms, ankles and hips. Ghostwriter believes most college students pierce or tattoo as an act of rebellion.

Ernie Caye, a senior public relations major from Louisville, denies getting her tattoo in an effort to be trendy.

"I didn't get my tattoo to please anyone: nor did I do it because everyone else was," shesaid. "Tattoos have been around for years, they always will be; that's why I got one." She admits that getting her tattoo (a dolphin on her lower hip) was a spontaneous action, but has only considered removing it because she regrets the design she chose. Caye says shekept her tattoo secret from her parents for two years.

Some students readily admit that they got a tattoo because everyone was getting one and they liked the shock value of it. Chris Chetwood, another EKU senior, got his tattoo, a bloody skull with a mohawk, during military boot camp. Chetwood doesn't see tattoos as trend, believing instead, "that they are more of a statement of your lifestyle." He has no regrets about his tattoo, but is glad he "gotit where a shirt will cover it up."

Body piercings range from navel and eyebrow piercing to tongue piercing and "private parts." While they often create more shock waves, piercings have one advantage over tattoos—they can be removed. Shawna Medlock, a junior from Richmond, got a belly-button ring this year. "I got it because I've always wanted one," she explained. 'I thought they were neat so I got it." When personalized license plates, monogram earrings and cross-stitch belts no longer adequately express who you are, think snake tattoo and nose ring connected to a earlobe. Mom and Dad will be the proud parents of a trendsetter.

Safety First

Sprinklers Coming to High-Rise Halls

If it hasn't come yet to your high-rise residence hall at EKU, a sprinkler system is coming soon.

During the summer of 1999, sprinkler systems were being installed in Commonwealth, Palmer, and Telford Halls.

The planned installation is part of a three-year, multi-million-dollar project to provide sprinklers in the University's high-rise residence halls. Other halls will be "sprinkled" over subsequent summers.

The action is consistent with a statewide plan to provide sprinkler systems for university residence halls.

"Our residence halls were built before fire codes required sprinkler systems," President Bob Kustra said. "We believe we are well-protected, and there is not cause for immediate alarm. However, we feel the installation of sprinkler system will further ensure the safety of our students."

Each residence hall room at Eastern is already equipped with a hard-wired smoke detector. Other safety precautions in the residence halls include fire alarms, fire extinguishers and regular fire drills. The University's residence hall staff receives extensive training in handling various emergency situations. As of Spring 1999, three of EKU's 16 residence halls had sprinkler systems, including eight-story Walters Hall.

Besides the ongoing sprinkler project, several residence halls are undergoing renovations.

Sanctions + Education

EKU Takes No Chances with Alcohol Violations The University in 1998-99 adopted tougher and more comprehensive sanctions for the possession, use and abuse of alcohol on University property and developed an innovative educational curriculum that includes an interactive CD-ROM for first-time offenders.

"We believe it is important to send a message that this University is serious about addressing the use and abuse of alcohol by students," said President Bob Kustra. "We think we have developed a very good combination of effective sanctions and expanded educational opportunities for those who may need help."

Michalle Rice, a counselor with the Counseling Center and a member of the campus-wide Substance Abuse Committee that collaborated on the new regulations, said: "This is a problem at the national level, and our campus community is no different, but we're going to do something about it. The majority of EKU students do not engage in high-risk behavior, but the ones who do can have a serious impact on the quality of life on campus."

In fact, a survey of EKU students between 1990 and 1996 revealed that more than one-third abstained from alcohol and of those students who do drink, the majority reported consuming three or fewer drinks on most occasions. Another recent study of the Commonwealth's state universities for the state Division of Substance Abuse showed that there are no significant differences in alcohol consumption levels among the eight campuses.

The educational program is structured around and interactive CD-ROM developed by the University that covers information specifically dealing with the sanctions and highlight's the potential dangers of alcohol abuse.

And, for the first time, those found guilty of second, third, and subsequent possession or consumption offenses now face financial assessments and must perform service on campus.

Clockwise from below: Alcohol is a frequent subject of newspaper headlines; a student demonstrates how the interactive and educational CD-ROM program works; efforts were increased to provide activities such as the rock wall climb at First Weekend; Christopher Rice and Betsy Bohannon discoss the new judicial sanctions. New Culture, ISA Helps International Students Adjust, Adapt Friends

By Rachel Lawson For most international students at EKU the International Student Association plays a key part for them adapting to a new culture and making them feel at home.

Zaburi Mutua, a computer information systems major from Kenya East Africa, said the ISA helped him build relationships, gave him the opportunity to make new friends and helped him adapt to a new culture.

The ISA holds events for international students to give them the opportunity to meet new people. The annual International Banquet allows them to express their culture. The students brought an authentic dish from their culture that they prepared themselves. Other students help with the preparations for the banquet.

Every month the ISA has a cookout or gettogether for the students. In the fall semester they took a trip to The Pinnacles near Berea to enjoy some of the scenery.

The ISA tries to do different things to entertain the international students. Ben Richiranovich, president of the ISA and a computer information systems major from Thailand, says that the ISA currently has 200 members.

For most ISA members, it is quite an adjustment coming to a new country to live and go to school. Richiranovich enjoys living here in the United States but admits he misses the food in Thailand.

"The food at home is much better and fresher than it is here," he said.

On the positive side are the movies.

"Here in the United States you can see movies before the rest of the world can," he said. "Movies have to be on videocassette before they are seen overseas."

Zaburi Mutua also misses the food from home and his family and friends. He remembers the first time he went to Wal-Mart in the United States. He spent six hours there and did not even see the whole

Faith and Fellowship

By Feoshia Henderson "Anybody need a Bible?"

Harvey Cozart, a campus minister, addresses more than 20 EKU students settling in for an evening of Bible study, singing and Christian fellowship.

Harvey gives Bibles to a few students, then begins a round of handouts -- a sheet of paper with words to three Gospel songs. His wife Melissa starts passing around the evening's Bible study. The study paper is headed with "The Character of Christ" typed in large, underlined letters.

Harvey and Melissa are the leaders of CBC, Collegiate, Black and Christian, an affiliate of Eastern's InterVarsity ministry.

The Cozarts had been holding Bible studies on their own for nearly two years. This year they felt God led them to join with InterVarsity.

In this first year as an affiliate, CBC attendance tripled, from a scant four or five students at each meeting to more than 25. Participation in CBC is free to all students. The group meets weekly to study the Scriptures and sing.

"We saw a lot of disunity among the African-American students," Melissa said.

"We felt this was a way to bring them together."

While the couple's main mission is reaching individuals, their ong-term goal is quite lofty. They plan to combine CBC with the larger, predominantly white InterVarsity group in hopes of fostering better race relations on campus.

"First, we want them to feel comfortable about themselves, then provide an atmosphere to bring about race-reconciliation."

Before Harvey begins the evening's Bible study, he decides to have an ice breaker. Everyone gives their name, hometown and a blessing they've received.

Angie Martin, a senior from Richmond, says her blessing is her child. Martin joined the group nearly a year ago, at a time in her life when she was having a lot of problems. Harvey and Melissa, she says, have been very loving and are concerned about her.

"It's see easy to stray from what's right," she said. "I could be doing a lot of other things now but I show up here, faithfully."

Different Kind of Wildlife Society Participates in Many Activities

By Alison Marshall The Wildlife Society doesn't have to go looking for projects to fill its calendar each semester. Many local organizations come to them.

"I'll get phone calls from the Fish and Game Service, the Army Depot, or the Forest Service asking for volunteers to aid in different types of activities," said Dr. Charles Elliott, adviser. The Wildlife Society has a reputation for being ready and willing to help many community endeavors.

"We take part in many activities over the year," said Elliott. "This includes anything from picking up trash and cleaning our adopted roadside to aiding the Forest Service with their bat survey work."

Other activities for the group include rounding up and banding geese for the State Fish ad Wildlife Department, conducting waterfowl surveys at the Blue Grass Army Depot and setting up a table during conservation week to educate students at public schools about conversation.

Most Wildlife Society activities help wildlife and biology majors to see firsthand the different types of jobs that can be found after graduation. Although the Wildlife Society is open to all students interested in the environment, it is most beneficial to those majoring in wildlife or biology.

"We have a contract with the State Fish and Wildlife Department to help in the study of deer diseases, which involves taking and analyzing samples," said Elliott. "This is our biggest fundraiser during the year."

The funds are used to send members to compete at the Southeastern Student Wildlife Conclave. At this convention the members take part in team events such as a quiz bowl and field competition, as well as individual competitions such as animal calls, canoe racing and orienteering.

At the end of the year the club holds its annual banquet, where the Thompson Award is given to the individual or corporation who does outstanding work toward conservation in the community. The award's nominees are chosen by the club's members, then as a group they decide the recipient.

"Being in the Wildlife Society helps bring the material we learn in class to come alive as we go into the field. It's a lot of fun and hard work," said Mike Strunk, president of the Wildlife Society.

Jumpance Theater Club Promotes Swing Craze

By Alison Marshall From movies to music videos and commercials, a new trend is making its way back into our lives. It has got a jazzy up-beat tune, lots of action on the dance floor and the attention of students and faculty alike.

Swing is a dance craze that started in America in the mid-19th century to give young people a closer way to interact.

"The movements that are associated with swing originate in Africa," said Marianne McAdam, associate professor of physical education, "and the popularity of swing, like other fads, comes around every ten years."

The Dance Theater Club held swing workshops during the fall semester as a fund-raiser. An average of 25 to 30 couples came to learn the ins and outs of swing. From tennis shoes to cowboy boots, young or old, no matter the background, swing introduced a great time for all who attended.

Many attended out of curiosity of this thing called swing, an envy of other people at the clubs, but whatever the reason, all who came left with smiles on their faces.

"Ever since I saw the movie 'Swing Kids' and Voodoo in concert, I knew that I wanted to know how to do that," said Melanie Purcell, a freshman nursing major from Lancaster.

Billy Hibbits, a junior theater major from London, added, "We wanted to learn swing because of a job opportunity at Kings Island Amusement Park, but I really enjoyed it."

So, after you learn all the steps and even swing your partner around your head a few times, where can a couple go to show off their new skill?

"I plan to go to Club Vertigo or the Blue Moon one night," said Nickalous Zuelke, a freshman marine biology major from Lancaster. Several clubs around Lexington and Richmond hold swing nights when they encourage all the swingers to get out on the dance floor and strut their stuff.

Swing is not only a great way to get close to someone special, it can be good for you.

"I think it's a great workout and a great time all around," Purcell said. "I get out of breath, but I don't feel tired."

By Rachel Lawson The 25-member Agriculture Club sponsors many events throughout the vear.

Its best -known activity is the lawn mower clinic, held every March, which gives club members the opportunity to make extra money and provide a service at a reasonable cost for local residents.

Brennan Gilkison, president, says the lawn mower clinic is the club's biggest fund-raiser. The money earned from the clinic is used for monthly cookouts, a senior send-off party and to buy gifts for the Salvation Army angel tree, to help give less fortunate children the opportunity to have a good Christmas.

Andrea Branstetter, vice president, said she is proud and happy to be involved with the angel tree event. The money made from the lawn mower clinic provides the club the opportunity to purchase gifts for the children and to do enjoy other fun events with each other.

The Agriculture Club also gives students the opportunity to meet more students in their department and to be more well acquainted with the professors, said Branstetter.

The Agriculture Club also gives the students different opportunities, and educates them on the advancements in agriculture. Gilkison said the club has helped him meet new people and gain leadership and communication skills.

Whether the members of the agriculture club at EKU are fixing mowers, buying gifts for less fortunate children or having a monthly cook out, they are having fun while getting an education.

Women's Ruchy Sport Growing in Popularity

Rugby Team are to be a female Eastern student and to be prepared to meet new friends and have fun. "I had never played any kind of team sport before I joined rugby," said Sara Martin, a sophomore wildlife management major from Winchester.

By Alison Marshall

The only requirements to join the Women's

For a majority of the players, that's true. Most had not previously played a team sport or, in some cases, never even planned on participating in any sport.

"That's what makes it so fun," said Martin. "We all get to learn together."

Team President Marie Kell, a junior ornamental horticulture major from Pennsylvania, said: "We have girls of all shapes, sizes and backgrounds on the team. The one thing that we all have in common is an interest in learning a new sport and having fun."

This year's team was relatively young, primarily composed of freshmen and sophomores. What they lacked in experience they made up in heart.

Women's rugby isn't all fun and games. "There are a few injuries, but I haven't seen anything major vet," Kell said.

Women's rugby has been a club sport five years at Eastern. At the same time, more teams have been formed at other area colleges and universities as interest has increased.

"There have been several more teams added to our schedule since I've been playing," Kell said. "Because of that, there has been a greater interest in the team from people on campus."

And after college? Many communities now have their own women's rugby teams.

"After you start, you can play for life," Kell said.

Bud Campus Habitat Chapter Gives Back to Community

By Alison Marshall The problem of inadequate housing is no stranger to Kentucky or the Richmond community. So how can a college student help fight the battle of poor living conditions? Simply by joining Eastern's chapter of Habitat for Humanity.

"Habitat for Humanity gives campus groups and students a chance to give back to the community," said Sarah Blossom, a senior occupational therapy major from Indianapolis, Ind., and the president of Eastern's chapter of Habitat for Humanity.

A heightened awareness of the growing problem of poor housing conditions has led more individuals to get involved.

"Many clubs like to use Habitat for Humanity as an activity for the whole group," said Blossom. "For a while I would get at least two or three calls a week from groups wanting to get involved."

But Habitat for Humanity is not just a group activity. "We need thirty to forty volunteers during the building process, so individuals are more than welcome to join in the fun," said Blossom.

Habitat for Humanity is a great way to help the less fortunate while learning a little about construction as well.

"While working on Habitat for Humanity I learned how to use a hammer to build walls," said T.J. Slone, a senior computer science major from Harrodsburg. "I also helped hang siding and the hurricane braces for the roof. It was exciting to work as a team with a group of intelligent people."

Because Eastern's chapter of Habitat for Humanity is not yet large enough to support its own house, it works with other chapters such as Madison County or Berea College.

"It is our goal that one day we will be able to raise enough funds for Eastern to completely back its own house," said Blossom. "If every student could donate one dollar I believe that this dream could come true."

"I would absolutely take part in Habitat for Humanity by doing whatever I could to help," said Slone. "I hope that more students will learn to feel the same way."

Habitat gives campus groups and students a chance to give back to the community.

Many Eastern students battle far more than exams and homework.

For those who live with a physical or learning disability, every day brings different challenges and obstacles.

Every April, the campus community gets a glimpse into those difficulties through Disability Awareness Day, held on conjunction with Spring Fling outside the Powell Building.

Student organizations from the Departments of Special Education and Occupational Therapy join to provide activities and simulations, including guided wheelchair tours and exercises that simulate blindness, hearing impairments and dyslexia. Also participating were representatives from the Department of Vocational Rehabilitation, the Department for the Blind and The Office of Services for Students with Disabilities.

"Our goal is to increase the level of disability awareness on campus and in the local community," said Teresa Belluscio, disabilities coordinator, Project Success director and a member of the Americans with Disabilities Act Advisory Committee.

"The Committee's goal is to increase awareness of disability issues on our campus," said Belluscio said. "We want to show the campus community what it's like to have a disability. Obviously, we want people to be more sensitive to those with disabilities."

Spring Find Annual Event Features Numerous Activities

Spring was in the air on Tuesday, April 13.

The annual Spring Fling, organized by the Student Senate but involving numerous campus groups, was held in front of the Powell Building and around the Meditation Chapel.

The event gives students and student organizations the chance to get involved with each other through a number of special activities.

Some of the organizations involved included the Baptist Student Union, Public Relations Student Society of America, ADA Advisory Committee and several fraternities and sororities.

The activities included water balloon fights and bake sales, among others.

Also, Spring Fling featured the election for 1999-2000 Student Senate officers. Chris Pace narrowly defeated Chris Rice 364-326.

Past Is Prologue

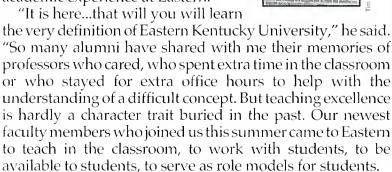

Installation Celebrates Eastern

Quoting William Shakespeare, Dr. Robert W. Kustra declared Friday, Oct. 2 that EKU's "past is prologue" and pledged even greater levels of excellence for the University in the new millennium.

Speaking at ceremonies that installed him as Eastern's ninth president, Kustra said that theme "helps honor those who have brought us to this point in EKU's journey and it commits each and every one of us to a standard of excellence in everything we do here at Eastern from this moment on."

In his inaugural address, Kustra urged the large crowd assembled in the Amphitheater to listen carefully to alumni when they reflect on their academic experience at Eastern.

"There are not words in the language adequate to explain the dedication and commitment our faculty makes to the task of teaching," continued Kustra. "Maybe that's why it is so easy to join with my fellow faculty senators and share governance of this institution."

Kustra, who taught for 22 years in Illinois colleges and universities, said students learn best when in the process of discovery.

"We have to move from a faculty-teaching focus to a student-learning focus," he said. "We must expand students' opportunities in service-learning, cooperative education and interdisciplinary problem-focused learning."

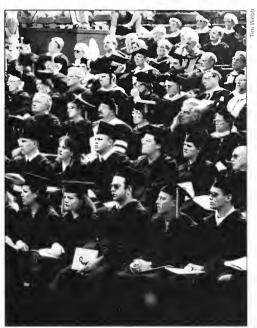

The most effective learning, Kustra said, "will take place on a campus where there is a sense of community among learners and teachers, where the intellect is challenged not only in the classroom, but also at extracurricular events, where intellectual pursuits are complemented by social and athletic programs that build esprit d'corps and loyalty to the institution."

Governors Agree

Kustra Right Choice to Lead EKU

The installation ceremonies for Dr. Kustra took on an even more regal aura, thanks to the participation of two current governors.

Govs. Paul Patton of Kentucky and Jim Edgar of Illinois both predicted nothing but success for Eastern's ninth president.

Speaking after a rousing rendition of "My Old Kentucky Home," Governor Patton said: "The sun truly does shine down on this great university. (EKU) is blessed with hundreds of thousands of alumni and friends around the world who understand what this institution has meant to them and to future generations of Kentuckians."

Patton said Kustra "has the ability to move this university to another level, to build upon the work of (preceding president) Hanly Funderburk and those who have gone on before."

Before assuming the EKU presidency, Kustra served as lieutenant governor in the Edgar administration from 1991 to 1998. In 1996, Edgar appointed Kustra to chair the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

"EKU has chosen well in picking Bob Kustra as its ninth president," Edgar said. "I have never been disappointed, and I'm sure you won't be disappointed with Bob Kustra.

"He's the most enthusiastic person I've ever known. Many times his enthusiasm would completely wear me out. But Bob, most importantly, is a doer. The selection of Bob Kustra was truly a loss for Illinois but, more importantly, was a great gain for the state of Kentucky."

First Year

Full of Change

From the day he arrived on the Richmond campus as Eastern Kentucky University's ninth president, Dr. Bob Kustra pursued a progressive agenda. The 1998-99 year at EKU was marked with change on every front.

One of the president's early priorities was to rebuild the campus culture. He formed a campuswide committee that developed an innovative "First Weekend" program to promote a greater sense of community among students, faculty and staff. The initiative proved very popular.

President Kustra also realigned the academic and administrative areas of the University to improve efficiency and effectiveness. The number of academic colleges was reduced from nine to five.

Also during his first year, Kustra:

re-established an Enrollment Management Advisory committee to address student recruitment and retention.

Encouraged, supported and implemented Faculty Senate initiatives to address grade inflation and further enhance the value of an EKU degree.

*Hired a full-time athletic director.

Initiated a study of EKU's classification/compensation and health care systems.

Provided for the transfer of employee scholarships to spouse or dependent children for use at EKŪ.

Regents Pass Extraordinary New Budget

Eastern's Board of Regents began the year with a renewed sense of optimism and purpose, having completed a national search that resulted in Dr. Bob Kustra's selection as the University's ninth president.

The regents ended the year on the same note of optimism by passing President Kustra's first budget, an "extraordinary" plan that offered new initiatives designed to provide new levels of excellence for EKU.

"This ($155 million) budget represents the very best thinking of all who know and love Eastern," Dr. Kustra said, "and reflects the goals and objectives of our strategic planning process."

Among the new initiatives funded by the regents were:

- Expanded efforts to enhance the freshman year experience and improve retention.
- •Enhanced First Weekend and Intramural Program.
- •Creation of a Center for Excellence in Teaching and Learning.
- •Establishment of a Center for Kentucky History and Politics.
- Increased levels of support for academically talented students.
- •Enhancements to technology, including computing capabilities and Internet access.
- Improvements to residence halls, including sprinkler systems in high-rise buildings.
- •Salary and benefits enhancements for employees.
- Enhancements to the intercollegiate athletics budget.

The regents traveled to Corbin for their January meeting and to tour EKU's Tri-County Center, which is Kentucky's largest extended campus facility.

Making the Grade

Changes Designed to Ensure Academic Integrity

After a three-year faculty study of grade inflation at EKU and colleges and universities nationwide, President Kustra announced in March a comprehensive University-wide plan designed to ensure academic integrity.

The new measures included grade indexing, a plusminus grading system and regular reports to all faculty that indicate course grade point averages and grade distribution. The plus-minus system will be implemented beginning in the fall 2000 semester when EKU's new student records management system is operational. Grade indexing and other measures will follow.

"Grade inflation speaks directly to academic integrity, academic excellence and accountability in post-secondary education," Dr. Kustra said. "Our faculty is to be commended for its efforts to study this national issue. We believe this comprehensive approach to grade inflation will help us more accurately report our students' knowledge and performance in the classroom.

"We are committed to preserving and enhancing the worth of a degree from Eastern Kentucky University," Kustra continued. "It is something we owe to our alumni and those students who will become our graduates. The new procedures also send a strong message to employers about the validity of an EKU transcript and the quality of our graduates."

Grade indexing is the process of adding to each student's official University transcript the average GPA for each course taken and the degree to which the student's grade exceeds the typical grade. Indexing will be used only in classes of eight or more students.

"The inclusion of grade indexing on EKU transcripts immediately shows whether students perform above or below their peers in each of their classes," said Dr. Kirk Jones, who chaired a five-member Faculty Senate Ad Hoc Committee on Grade Inflation. "We believe that grades have value and that a graduate school or employer should be able to evaluate them as one measure of a student's ability. Also, grade indexing will place course grades in the context of a student's ability.

Tops in Co-Op

PR Major Ramsay Sold on Value of Practical Experience

After graduating near the top of his class at Madison Southern High School in 1995, Mark Ramsay didn't have Eastern Kentucky University in his sights.

The senior public relations major from Berea is thankful, now, that he refocused his college plans and enrolled at EKU.

"I've been real pleased with my education at EKU," Ramsay said. "Eastern's mass communications program teaches you the skills you need. Thanks to my experiences at Eastern, I was well prepared for the workforce."

As a result of that preparation, Ramsay recently received the Outstanding Senior/ Graduate Student Award from the Kentucky Association of Cooperative Education and Career Employment (KACECE). Also, EKU's Division of Cooperative Education earned the Outstanding Organization Award and Dr. Glen Kleine of the Eastern faculty received the Distinguished Service Award.

Since May 1999, Ramsay has been an intern with the Preston-Osborne public relations firm in Lexington. Previously, he served a practicum with the D. James Kennedy Center for Christian Statesmanship in Washington, D.C. and a co-op with Kentucky Utilities.

Ramsay, who has achieved a perfect 4.0

GPA, is sold on the co-op experience.

"You get work experience and can begin to establish your own network," he said. "It's a different type of learning environment you just can't get in a classroom.

"I've gained a lot more confidence in my writing ability and an appreciation for having co-workers who can give me feedback, Ramsay continued. "The classroom can never tell me if I'm ready for the real world, but the real world can tell me if I'm ready."

Ramsay, who received a $1,000 scholarship with the award, said he came to Eastern "insecure about how competent I would be. I just received a lot of encouragement from the people like Dr. (Ron) Wolfe," former chair of the Department of Mass Communications. "I also got turned on to a lot of opportunities."

Mark Ramsay has jump-started his career with an internship at the Preston-Osborne public relations firm in Lexington

It was a momentous year for EKU's College of Law Enforcement.

In the summer of 1998, the College was named by the Council on Postsecondary Education as a Justice and Safety Program of Distinction. The designation immediately meant additional resources to better serve students, Kentuckians and the nationwide justice and safety community. The infusion of $2.8 million in state funding, plus matching funds from the University, will allow the College to attract more academically talented students and provide greater opportunities through more scholarships, enhanced laboratory fa- Media clamored for a close look at the explosions at the cilities, a significant Bomb Crime Scene Investigator School.

increase in graduate assistantships, more hands-on and research experiences and improved student services.

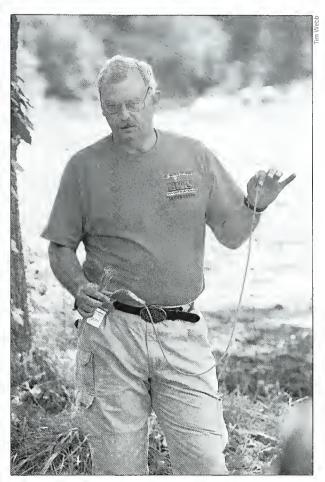

"We feel like we were already distinctive, well known in Kentucky and beyond for our teaching, service and applied research," said Dr. Gary Cordner, dean of the College. "This will allow us to play an even bigger role within Kentucky and enhance our reputation even further nationally."

In 10 years, Cordner believes the College will be recognized "universally as one of the top programs in the country. We'll be known not just for good research and good scholarship, but also for having a close working relationship with justice and safety agencies."

As evidence of that relationship, the College received a $350,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Justice to conduct a Bomb Crime Scene Investigator School in the summer of 1999. The 10-week event attracted more than 200 law enforcement, fire and safety officials from around the country and resulted in considerable media exposure.

Promises, Promises

Eastern Program Teaches Value of Volunteerism

Eastern Kentucky University is keeping its promise.

In fact, EKU kept thousands of promises during 1998-99 as a University of Promise within the America's Promise program, implementing educational enrichment programs throughout central and southeastern Kentucky.

Eastern is the first institution of higher education in the Commonwealth and the 11th in the nation to be selected as an America's Promise/Universities of Promise site. The program was founded by Gen. Colin Powell to promote volunteerism.

Along with Eastern's AmeriCorps members and student and faculty volunteers, many America's Promise volunteers are serving students in 23 area school districts.

In the Career Reads program, AmeriCorps members have recruited community volunteers to visit classes and talk to students about their occupations and to read books about their careers.

Several Eastern students volunteered by becoming Book Buddies in local schools. Mortar Board members, for example, were matched with children at Kirksville Elementary School. Members of the Kappa Alpha Order served as Book Buddies at Waco Elementary, and Lambda Sigma members volunteered their time at Model Laboratory School.

"Our main goal is service," said Tommy Gotreaux of Lambda Sigma. "The community of Richmond gives a lot to Eastern and we want to give something back to the community. This was a good opportunity to do that."

In addition, about 30 of EKU's international students helped to deliver educational enrichment programs in the schools.

Real Progress

Student Paper Captures Biggest National Award

The Eastern Progress, the student-produced weekly newspaper at Eastern Kentucky University, has captured numerous national awards in recent years.

The biggest one ever came in the fall of 1998, when the Progress was named Best All-Around Non-Daily Campus Newspaper in the Society of Professional Journalists' 1997 Mark of Excellence competition.

Four Progress staff members accepted the award recognizing the Progress as the nation's top non-daily paper at SPJ's convention in Los Angeles, Calif., Oct. 22-

The top three campus newspapers in each region of the country earned regional honors, and the first-place winner of each region moved on to national competition.

"This is the first time we won the national title," said Adviser Libby Fraas. "The competition requires three designated issues from the spring and fall 1997. We had no choice, but luckily the judges looked at some of the staff's strongest pages."

One of the entries included front-page stories on the death of former Eastern president Robert R. Martin. Another investigated a Richmond homicide.

During that time, the Progress was led by Mary Ann Lawrence and Tim Mollette, both of whom went on to join the Charlotte (N.C.) Observer news staff.

"They provided leadership, vision and talent, but it's amazing how much of the paper's success is a product of the whole staff working together -- from photographers and graphics people to our writers and ad staff," Fraas noted.

Centers Prosper

Many Students Eyeing Second Careers

Eastern's three extended campus centers continued to prosper in 1998-99 as the University took additional steps to increase accessibility and services at the Corbin, Danville and Manchester sites.

Each of the centers offered a record number of classes in the Fall 1998 semester, and the Danville Center enrolled a record 544 students. The Tri-County Center in Corbin enrolled 1,121 students and the Manchester Center 303.

The centers continue to draw many non-traditional students, many looking for a fresh career start. For example, when an injury ended Cathy Ison's employment at American Greetings in Danville three years ago, she turned a negative into a positive. Now the junior English major is eyeing a second career as a schoolteacher.

"My granddaughter thinks it's the neatest thing on earth," Ison said. "She's always telling her friends that her grandmother is going to college."

Special efforts were begun to attract more males of all ages to the Centers. The Richmond campus population is about 60 percent female, but that rises to an average of about 75 percent at the three centers.

A State of the South Report released by MDC Inc., a North Carolina-based research group, says that as the region grows more dependent on The jobs men have traditionally dominated are gradually disappearing, and they need to learn skills and acquire the education that will allow them to live and adapt to conditions in the 21st century," said Marijane Clark, director of the Manchester Center. "We want them to understand the value of an education and that education pays."

The biggest development, however, was the announcement that a new Southeast Postsecondary Education Center, EKU Corbin campus, would be constructed on the city's new by-pass. The site was dedicated in special ceremonies on May Groundbreaking is tentatively scheduled for early 2000 and projections call for construction to be completed by the fall semester of 2001.

> The event is believed to the longest-running of its kind in the Commonwealth.

> Dr. David Greenlee, director of choral activities at EKU and director of the Madrigal Feastes the past 18 years, likened the event to "staging our own enormous Christmas party for three nights. The students enjoy it because it's a totally different style of music. They get to wear costumes and eat along with the audience."

Helping the Deaf

Unique Program Serves Kentuckians

Deaf and hard-of-hearing individuals in Kentucky and elsewhere soon will have improved services, thanks to a new degree program and a Center on Deafness at EKU.

The new baccalaureate degree program in interpreting for deaf individuals is the only one of its kind in Kentucky and one of only 20 nationwide. The Center on Deafness is a natural outgrowth of the long-time partnership between EKU's Department of Special Education and the State Department of Vocational Rehabilitation.

Since 1986, Eastern had offered the Commonwealth's only associate degree program in interpreter training. "Our four-year program will provide additional instruction in interpreting skills and will increase students' overall educational background."

The need for qualified interpreters continues to outdistance the availability of interpreters, according to Dr. Laurence Hayes, coordinator of the program and director of the Center. "A baccalaureate program will produce and even better-prepared and more marketable graduate."

The Center will work closely with academic and non-academic partners to "serve as a catalvst and conduit for the development of innovative programming, training, research and networking," Hayes said.

"The goal is to blend the resources we have here at EKU with those of the Department of Vocational Rehabilitation to assist individuals, agencies and the Commonwealth in advancing the education, career and life goals of deaf and hard-of-hearing Kentuckians."

EKU will partner with the Department of Vocational Rehabilitation in the areas of grant writing and research, education and training, consultation and outreach and collaboration and referral.

"No Free Worm

Grads Given Choice:to be Geese or Eagles

Author and former newspaper editor James D. Squires had a pragmatic but uplifting message for about 2,200 EKU graduates and degree candidates at the University's 92nd spring commencement exercises

Saturday, May 8.

"It is my obligation today to tell you that despite the sense of self-importance instilled in you so far by your parents, your teachers and your television, you have been misled," Squires said. "Unless you are among the minuscule number of Americans about to inherit a fortune from nearly dead parents, you might as well close your mouth because there is no free worm -even if you are the early bird. From this day on you will have to earn everything you get, perhaps even give up something in return. And the chances are pretty good that when the final balance is struck, you won't even get everything you're due.

"This is the bad news," said Squires, a 30-year journalism veteran and former editor of The Chicago Tribune. "Being a young, educated American does not guarantee you either wealth or happiness. The good news is the two are not related. In the end, the measure of you as a human being will not be what you have amassed but what you have been willing to give. In the pursuit of happiness, what you expect to be given is of far less consequence than what you plan to give."

Squires told the graduates and degree candidates that because of their virtually unlimited access to information, they can be the "best educated citizens ever to live on this earth, which means that in a system of self-government like we have, you can make the best informed decisions and produce the best society.

"The single great promise of America is the freedom to develop and pursue your own dream," he continued. "This raises the most important question of all. Hungry young birds that you are, exactly what kind of bird are you going to be? The choice is one between geese and eagles, both big, majestic, beautiful birds."

Geese, Squires reminded his audience, flock together in the interest of conformity and selfpreservation. "Or you can be an eagle ... one who sets your own course with your own standards of success and happiness.

"The primary opportunity and main obligation of your generation remains the same as it was for mine -- and that is to strengthen and preserve America's democracy for the next. Whether it will be a generation of geese or eagles is up to you.

"But remember, it is because of the eagles in your past that you still have the choice not to be a goose."

What happened?

"I wasn't ready for school yet," said lcGuffey, a baccalaureate nursing ajor. "I partied my rear end off, but I ot it out of my system."

It didn't hurt that, after his second emester started on a similar note, IcGuffey dropped out of school and ined the Navy. Little did he know then ist how fortuitous that decision was.

After traveling the world as a hospital orpsman, including service in the lesert Storm conflict, McGuffey came ack to Eastern in 1996 through the ledical Enlisted Commissioning Proram, which pays many of his college ills as he remains in the Navy.

"I was the equivalent to an LPN," McGuffey explained. "I decided I wanted to go on and become a registered nurse (RN). I enjoy helping people, the caring aspect."

When he resumed his college studies, McGuffey didn't plan on getting involved in student or professional organizations, at least on the level that he was at Marion County High School. "I just planned on getting my degree, keeping my GPA up and getting back with the Navy. But I just decided life was too boring."

So he joined every applicable organization. Actually, he did more than merely join. He soon assumed leadership responsibilities. He serves on the Nomination and Election Committee of the National Student Nurses Association, as president of the local chapter of the Nursing Student Network, vice president of the Student Emergency Care Association and recently completed a term as secretary of the Kentucky Association of Nursing Students. He also is a member of Sigma Theta Tau, a national honorary society, and serves as a CPR instructor on campus and a hunter education instructor in the community.

"I know of no other student currently in our College who has involved himself or herself in the pre-professional associations as Luke has," said Joyce Begley, assistant professor of nursing. "Luke is a good leader who manifests the qualities of vision, dedication, respect for others, the ability to seek assistance when needed, the ability to be interdependent and the ability to persuade others to get involved."

Now, at age 31, McGuffey is set to receive that long-awaited college degree and is well past halfway toward retirement from the Navy. When that day comes, he plans to move back to Kentucky and eventually teach at the college level.

The Navy has prepared McGuffey well by broadening his horizons.

"Any day that goes by that you don't learn something is a day lost," he said. "It has made me a better person."

Hale Wants To Fly Even Higher As Fighter Pilot

Someday she wants to fly fighter jets. For now, Jennifer Hale is flying high as the top senior in EKU's College of Applied Arts and Technology.

The technology education major from Lancaster plans to teach, but not before she learns what it's like to soar the skies.

"I've always been a tomboy, always loved that type of thing," she said of her devotion to things mechanical, technical and airborne. "It just comes easy to me for the most part."

If a stint in the military doesn't materialize, Hale plans to attend graduate school, where as a female she would likely remain among the minority in most classes.

So far, that has not been an issue. "The guys and the teachers don't treat me any differently," she said. "Of course, I've never had a problem being 'one of the guys."

Hale never has had any trouble making the grade, either. The 1994 graduate of Garrard County High School carried a 3.94 GPA into the fall semester at Eastern, including a perfect 4.0 in her major.

This is no bookworm, though. Hale volunteered to help establish an EKU chapter of the Technology Education Collegiate Association. And she says her fondest memory of Eastern is "the people I've met, the friends I've made."

She also has juggled classes and activities with a part-time job. "I've worked at least 20 hours a week since I started," Hale said. "It has made made made made everything more.

"I study when I have to," she said.

Hale said her mother, Barbara convinced her to pursue a college degree. "Since I didn't have a lot o technology in high school, my mon talked me into a four-year university just in case I got into technology and didn't like it."

And Mom isn't just dispensing advice. She's setting an example, too, as a sociology major at Eastern. Jennifer's sister is a graduate student at Colorado State, seeking a master's degree in creative writing.

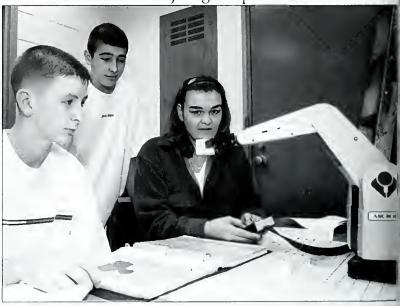

A high school mathematics and English teacher, David Cox, also was instrumental in Hale's success. "He expected a lot of us, encouraged us to go to college and spent time after school helping us study for the ACT."

She also credited Dr. Steve Fardo, Dr Roger Prewitt and Dr. Gary Chastain o the EKU technology faculty for pointing her to technology education, getting her involved in student organizations and nurturing her academic growth. "They've been wonderful," she said.

Fardo said Hale is a "very conscientious student who tries to do everything to perfection, and she has an exceptionally nice personality. Her personality plus her conscientiousness will make her a good teacher."

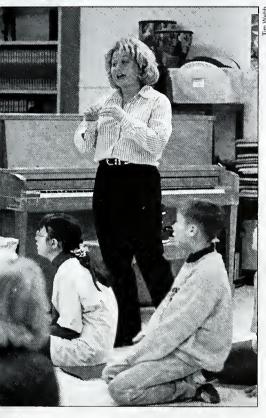

Or graduate student. Or jet fighter pilot.

Jennifer Hale wants to fulfill a long-time dream of serving as a jet fighter pilot.

Parents' Encouragement, Prodding Pay Off for Brown

a Brown, top senior in the College of Arts and Humanities, says she learns every how influential music can be in a child's life.

Erica Brown remembers her parents etting the timer on the oven to remind eir young daughter about piano ractice.

That gentle prodding and constant ncouragement years ago has paid off. rown, a music education major from heelersburg, Ohio, was named the p senior in the College of Arts and umanities.

"My parents' support always helped e feel successful," said Brown, who ok a 3.7 GPA into the fall semester.

"I've been playing piano since I was 8, nd I had always been in all the choirs in :hool," she recalled. "When I decided I anted to teach, I loved music so much thought I could combine the two. very day, I learn how influential music is in a child's life, how it stimulates a part f of the brain that nothing else can."

Brown also credits her piano teacher during her high school years for her career choice and success at Eastern.

"(Dara Henry) always pushed me to be the best I could be and gave me the opportunity to teach piano lessons," she noted. "That motivated me."

And Brown certainly hasn't lacked for motivation since her arrival on the Richmond campus. Besides her outstanding academic record, she has been active in the College Music Educators National Conference, serving as vice president at the local chapter and state

"I've been able to go to a variety of seminars and meet a lot of people in the field," she said. "Through my involvement, I've gotten a lot of valuable information."

Dr. John Roberts, chair of the Department of Music, called Brown "an excellent student. Perhaps her most important quality is her personality. She is always friendly and vibrant."

Brown also has displayed her leadership abilities as a resident assistant in her residence hall.

"I've grown tremendously in my leadership and communication skills and in my ability to deal with people," she said. "I wouldn't be nearly as prepared for teaching if I hadn't been an ŘA."

Brown said she would like to begin her teaching career at the elementary school level, but also harbors hopes of earning a master's degree in music therapy and pursuing that vocational

"That's a very growing field," she said, "one where I could help people through music."

Renewed Commitment Helps Binggeli Succeed Academically

Her former classmates at Madison and Central High School might be a little surprised to read this story.

Although Jennifer Binggeli was not a bad student in high school, few would have expected her to be the top senior one day in EKU's College of Business.

But this is not the same Jennifer Binggeli they knew back then. That's what a renewed commitment to academics, a decision on a career course (health care administration) and a "wonderful" faculty can do for an intelligent young woman.

Forget the stereotype about the all-A high school student who, amidst all the distractions, develops bad study habits in college and flounders. Binggeli went the opposite direction.

"When I got to college, I realized it was time to start thinking about a career," said Binggeli, who has recorded an overall 3.87 GPA, including a perfect 4.0 in her major. "I've done so much better. My grades have definitely been better."

Binggeli, who is also working on her prepharmacy requirements, was always interested in the health care field, "but I didn't know how I'd work with patients. I get too attached to people. But I love administration, so it kind of went together."

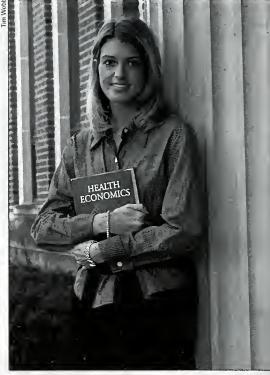

After earning her health care administration degree, she plans to finish her prepharmacy requirements at Eastern in 1999-2000 and then enter pharmacy school. Eventually, she hopes to manage a chain of pharmacies.

Dr. Oliver Feltus, her academic adviser, would not be surprised to see Binggeli reach her goals.

"Jennifer is a bright, energetic, highly motivated individual," Feltus said. "She is driven to succeed and to make a contribution to her profession and her community."

Binggeli's energy is reflected in her array of extra-curricular activities.

She is a member of the Student Senate, the local student organization of the American College of Health Care Administrators, Rotaract and the Chi Omega sorority, which she has served as president. Her community activities include raising money for the Mary G. Copeland Home and reading to children. And she has worked throughout college, including a job this year as a technician at the University of Kentucky Hospita Pharmacy. She was even a finalist for Homecoming Queen this fall.

Jennifer Binggeli has been a bigger academic success at Eastern than at Madison Central High School.

"Given her various outside activities and the difficult nature of her courses, find her ability to achieve a 4.0 GPA in each of the last three semesters to be outstanding," Feltus said.

"I always have to be doing something,' said Binggeli. "My activities give me some personal satisfaction."

Perhaps that explains why "I love school. All my teachers have beer wonderful and that has been a big motivation and has given me the encouragement to succeed."

Binggeli said all the remaining suppor she needs comes from her mother, Sandy Huddleston, a nurse at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Lexington and part-time nursing instructor at EKU.

"My mom's been very successful and I try to follow in her path."

That path was literally strewn with rubble in November 1997 when their Richmond home was destroyed by fire.

Jennifer Binggeli might have lost her past in that blaze but, thanks to her perseverance, commitment and work ethic, her future is brighter than ever.

Jenny Clark, top senior in the College of Education, carried a perfect 4.0 GPA into her final semester at Eastern.

The top senior in the College of ducation almost became an occupa-

Jenny Clark of Philpot started her eshman year as a pre-occupational erapy major, but soon "realized lidn't want to work in a hospital etting.

"I felt God was calling me to be a acher, so I thought and prayed a lot bout it," she recalled. "I really enjoy ds and I really enjoy math and rience."

Time has proven that Clark made the ght decision. As a middle grades math nd science teaching major, she carried perfect 4.0 GPA into her final semester: Eastern.

"It (4.0) was one of my goals," Clark cknowledged, "but I knew that all I ould do was my best."

She has certainly done that, according to Dr. Melinda Wilder, a science ducation professor at Eastern.

"Jenny has demonstrated a commitment to excellence," Wilder said. Through her exemplary participation classes, in professional organizations and community activities, she has ositively impacted the lives of fellow udents, middle school students and astructors."

Clark said that three years ago she would have had no idea what to do" in front of a classroom.

"I'm a lot more confident now," she said. "I feel like I've matured a lot and I've been prepared well to go into a school and be able to teach."

In addition to her academic activities, Clark has been actively involved in the campus and community through the Wesley Foundation, Intervarsity Christian Fellowship (ICF), Kappa Delta Phi, Golden Key National Honor Society and the Kentucky Education Association-Student Program. With the Wesley Foundation, she has participated in the Jericho Road ministry, Meals on Wheels and Bible Study. She has also served as missions coordinator for ICF and is currently vice president for Kappa Delta Phi.

"Those activities have really shaped me as far as strengthening my character and faith," she said. "I've received a lot of support through groups, and they've helped me to find my purpose and remember what's important."

Middle school students, because of their transitional age, are often regarded as difficult. But Clark is looking forward to teaching them.

"They're still impressionable, so you can really give them a boost to succeed," she said. "If I can give them a lot of support at that age, they'll have a better chance of succeeding."

High School Football Injury Sealed Hill's Career Plans

Little did Daniel Hill know at the time it happened that a high school football injury would seal his career plans.

Well, actually, it was his recovery from the shoulder injury that set him on an educational path at Eastern that would include both physical education and athletic training.

Now, the former Washington County High School linebacker has been named the top senior in EKU's College of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics.

Hill wants to teach, probably at the high school level, and serve as an athletic trainer as a sideline.

A summer job as a camp counselor after his senior year at WCHS convinced Hill he would enjoy teaching.

"I enjoy working with kids," he said. "In high school, I was an athlete. College slapped me in the face and said, 'Here's your future.""

Like many Eastern students before him, Hill will be the first in his family to earn a college degree.

"My family has been real supportive," he said. "I could talk all day about what they've done to help me."

Hill says much the same about the support and encouragement he has received from Eastern faculty.

"All my professors in physica education are real motivating and have influenced me in their own way."

Besides achieving a 3.5 GPA (3.8 in his major), Hill has been a campus leader He has served as president of the Student Athletic Trainers Association and as treasurer of the Health, Physica Education and Recreation Club. He also has participated in the Kappa Delta P educational honor society and as a student member of the Kentucky Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance. He received the 1998 Fred Darling HPR Leadership Award.

"Throughout his career at EKU Daniel has proven himself to be ar outstanding student both in and out of the classroom," said Jack Adams professor of physical education. "He successfully juggles majors in physical education and athletic training, donates his time and talent to the local catholic community by playing guitar at various church services and has often taken the initiative to teach in-service programs for incoming athletic training students."

Gordon Elmore has a different take on the rigors of college from many of his peers.

It's called perspective. You see, Elmore has viewed life from the other side.

"When you work in jobs that you don't like for 10 to 15 years, school is not real hard by comparison," the 38-year-old Louisvillian said.

Elmore, a physics major, was recently named the top senior in the College of Natural and Mathematical Sciences.

The son of Rev. A.J. and Ann Elmore is living proof of the truth behind one of Aesop's most famous fables: the race doesn't always go to the early leader.

Although grades weren't really the issue, this preacher's son dropped out of Louisville Brown High School in 1977. He soon earned his GED, though, spent four years in the Air Force and then about a dozen years working in corrections in Kentucky and California.

Hardly your usual route to the top of your class.

"I enjoy what I'm learning," Elmore explained. "And that enjoyment leads to increased effectiveness, which leads to mastery, which leads to more enjoyment."

His adviser, Dr. Jerry Cook, called Elmore an "outstanding student and individual. He has been a role model for students in our department (and) has s an example that has influenced other students to strive for higher standards

As if that isn't high enough prais Cook termed Elmore "the most ethic person that I have ever met."

Elmore spent this past summon working with a research group at the University of Kentucky.

"I was doing stuff where there's r answer in the back of the book," Elmo said. "As good a student as I am (3 GPA entering the fall semester), I thin after that experience, that I'll be a bett researcher. They needed boldness ar daring, and I've got a little bit of that.

After graduation, he plans to stuce particle theory in graduate school are eventually teach at a college or university or work in a laboratory.

Ask the ever-witty Elmore what he miss most about Eastern and he mention Cook's "crazy teaching metods," Dr. David Sousa's "instruction the ways of the physics community Dr. Ray Tennant's "smooth, interactival way of teaching math" and, o "shooting the bull" with the custodi staff.

Houghtaling came to Eastern from and Rapids, Mich., to enroll in the niversity's nationally recognized fire ad safety engineering program. But a nee injury prompted her to reconsider or major.

She settled on history.

"I like the mysteries behind history, nowing how and why things happen," e said. "We take for granted how we of where we are."

She plans eventually to pursue aster's and doctorate degrees and ach at the college level. But not before e serves in the Peace Corps.

"I traveled to Europe in the summer 1997, and I enjoyed that experience ry much," Houghtaling said. "To aly understand a culture, one has to be part of it. I'd like to see some of the orld and know how I fit into it. When teach, I'd like to be able to say this notograph is of somewhere I've been.

"And when everything is said and done, I would like to have done something good. When we give, we receive so much more than we could give."

As an active member of EKU's Honors Program, she already has traveled extensively within the United States, participating in panel presentations at several state, regional and national conferences.

"The Honors Program has been a real source of stimulation and a challenge for me," she said. "There's a real sense of community in the program. People know who you are and you can't hide. They challenge you to do better."

Houghtaling, who took a 3.97 GPA into the fall semester, said her Honors professors and other faculty brought out her best.

"They're always willing to learn new things, and they've expected more of me than I thought I could deliver. They've seen my ability when I couldn't. I believe in my own abilities more now."

And that's exactly what Houghtaling has tried to accomplish with her work as a mentor in a University retention program.

"I wanted to give something back," she said, "and I wanted to get some experience so I would know if teaching if something I wanted to do. I wanted to help other people learn. It has been extremely rewarding."

Houghtaling has been active in several campus organizations, including Golden Key National Honor Society, the Honors Program Advisory Council, Phi Alpha Theta and the Kentucky Public Health Association.

Her busy itinerary developed more by design than happenstance.

"Somebody once told me that college is what you put into it," Houghtaling said. "I wanted my college experience to be well-rounded. When your life becomes so focused on one thing and you neglect other things, you run into problems. Our job as students is to be good students, but you can't neglect other areas of life."

Colonels Record 21st Winning Season in Row

Although for highly unusual reasons, the Colonels once again found themselves with a lot on the line when they suited up for their regular season finale.

But this was one was for pride, not a conference title or playoff berth.

Using a heart-stopping finish with a 26-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Waylon Chapman to wide receiver Rondel Menendez with just 34 seconds left, the Colonels were able to defeat Eastern Illinois 28-24 and close the season with a 6-5 overall record, including 4-3 in the OVC.

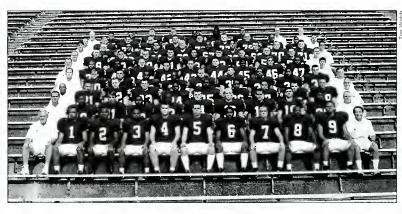

It marked the 21st straight winning season at Eastern and 26th consecutive non-losing season.

"I'm really proud of this team," said Coach Roy Kidd, who completed his 35th year. "They faced so much all season ... and kept hanging in there. It was kind of sad before the game to see all the crutches and injured players. I am so glad we came back and won this game for the seniors, as much as anything."

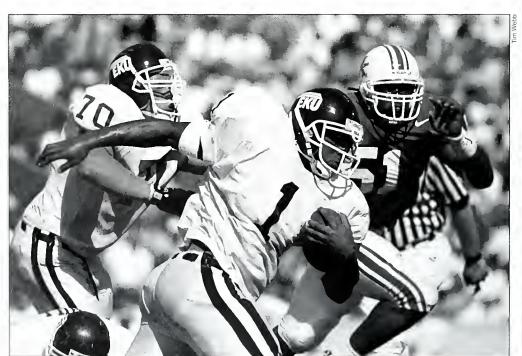

With that catch, Menendez closed his sterling career with school records for most career TDs (27) and most career yards pass receiving (2,990).

Junior tailback Derick Logan led the Colonels in rushing with 556 yards, followed by sophomore tailback Corey Crume at 543. Both were injured at times during the season.

Quarterback Jon Denton, who chose not to return for his senior season, was the OVC's top-rated quarterback at 119-217 for 18 TDs and only six interceptions. Defensively, linebackers Brad Folke and Charles Tinsley and safety Shawn Gallant led the way.

Loss of Key Players Hurts Young Colonels

The loss of four key players to grade problems and another to a career-ending injury pretty much explains the fortunes of the 1998-99 men's basketball team, which concluded at 3-23 and 2-16 in conference play.

"No one is more frustrated than I am, and no one has worked harder than our coaches and myself in trying to turn this thing around," said second-year Coach Scott Perry. "It takes time in the early stages. Everybody has just got to be patient."

The loss of heralded recruit Mario Duncan, two other promising recruits, Sam Hoskin and Will Morris, and returning post player Ibrahim Myles (first semester only) and the career-ending back injury to Minnesota transfer Charles Thomas "was just too much for this young ballclub to overcome. I am so proud of the way they battled game in and game out, knowing they were going to be outmanned every time out. We have a lot of positives to look forward to going into the next year."

One reason for that optimism is the return of one of the league's better backcourts. Freshman guard Whitney Robinson recorded one of the best freshman seasons ever at Eastern, scoring 17.8 ppg, which ranked him in the top 10 among all the nation's freshmen. Sophomore guard Darius Acuff added 12.3 ppg and junior forward Darick Mattox scored 10.8 ppg.

The Colonels' wins came over Belmont, UT-Martin and Eastern Illinois.

"We're confident that we'll be a much better ballclub next year," Perry said.

Season-Ending Slump Leaves Women at 11-16

Eight season-ending losses dropped the Lady Colonel basketball team from its usual perch in the upper echelon of the Ohio Valley Conference, but the squad will bounce back in 1999-2000, Coach Larry Inman vowed.

"We're excited about next season," said Inman, whose 11th team finished 11-16 overall and 8-10 in conference play.

Eastern bowed in the first round of the OVC tourney, but played impressively in a 102-87 loss to a strong UT-Martin team.

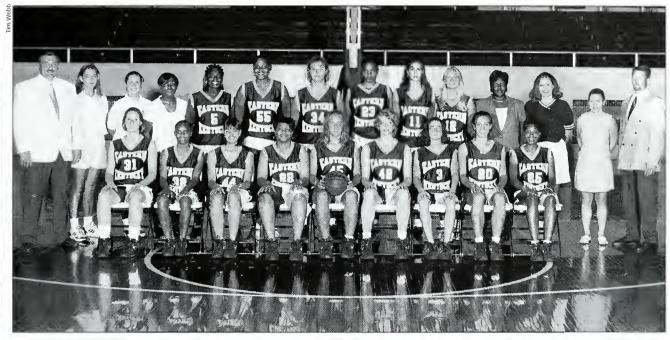

"We finally shot the ball decently," Inman said. "If we had shot the ball like we did against UT-Martin, we would have probably won some of those last seven games."

Sophomore forward Charlotte Sizemore led Eastern in scoring at 17.6 ppg. Junior guard Marla Gearhart, who was injured in December and played only eight games, was next at 14.2 ppg.

Senior center Jennifer King averaged 8.3 points and a team-leading 7.6 rebounds.

Freshman guard Mikki Bond led the team in steals (1.9 per game) and assists (3.5 apg). At 47 percent, sophomore center Candice Finley led the squad in field goal shooting.

Brighter Days Ahead

Volleyball Team 3-23, But Most Will Return

Brighter days are ahead for the women's volleyball team, which won only three of its 26 matches.

All but one player, senior outside hitter Amanda Deerhake, will return from new Coach Lori Duncan's first squad.

All the Colonels' victories came in Ohio Valley Conference play, in which they finished 3-15. Eastern beat Tennessee State twice and Middle Tennessee once.

"I don't feel discouraged," Duncan said. "I don't feel like we don't have a lot to work with last year. I've got to keep putting in perspective that it is our first year. We were not able to bring in a recruiting class, and a lot of people are playing roles that they won't be playing in the future.

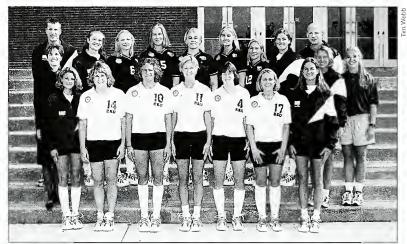

"I think our work ethic will be very intense...and we will be ready to take on the challenges that await us."

Statistically, Courtney Bowen and Mary Lee Keranko led the team in kills with 283 and 282, respectively. Shannon Moreno registered 604 sets. Bowen had 246 digs and Katie Lyon totaled 46 blocks.

Duncan, who played at Eastern 1980-83, plans to bring in up to five recruits for the 1999 season. The staff will be looking to add two middle blockers, an outside hitter and a defensive specialist.

Record Setters

Colonels Shatter 13 School Marks

The Colonel baseball team set 13 school records and tied three others in a successful 1999 season that ended with a 35-25 record, the school's best in nine years, and a third-place finish in the Ohio Valley Conference Tournament.

Eastern opened the tourney with wins over Murray State (8-5) and Southeast Missouri (13-6), before falling to eventual tournament champion Eastern Illinois (9-4) and Middle Tennessee (4-3).

"I'm really proud of our team. We competed so well and it's tough to go out with a close loss like we had to Middle," said Coach Jim Ward. "This was as good a senior class as we've had. It was fun this year.

"Our objective was to win a ring," he added. "This was a real good baseball season and we're looking forward to good things next year because we have a good nucleus coming back."

EKU finished 14-10 inside league play, good for third place in the final regular-season standings. One highlight was a 9-8 victory over the University of Kentucky.

Seven Colonels received post-season notice from the OVC, paced by junior first baseman Lee Chapman (.373, 20 HR's, 71 RBI's) and senior right fielder Sean Murray (.355-13-61), who were picked first-team All-OVC.

Receiving second-team all-conference notice were senior catcher Joe Smith (.299-11-48), junior third baseman Jason Sharp (.371-9-35), junior designated hitter Adam Basil (.344-12-47) and junior lefthanded relief pitcher Mike Martini (6-1, 5 saves, 4.22 ERA).

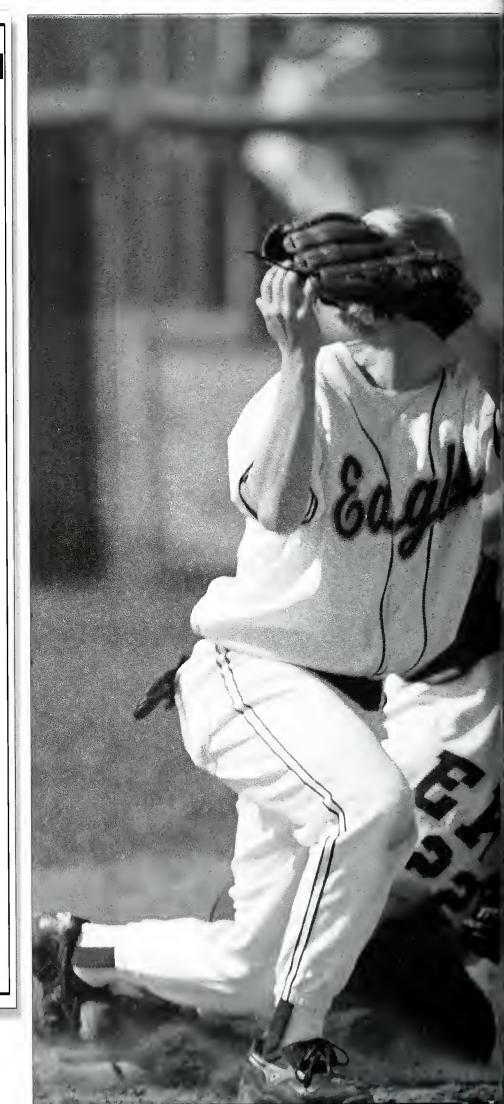

Freshman righthander Chip Albright was an honorable mention choice on the all-conference team. He closed the season with a 9-5 mark and 4.12 ERA.

Season-Ending Slump

Softball Team Loses 13 of Final 17 Games

Through April 11, the EKU softball team was a respectable 19-18 against a tough schedule.

From that point on, however, the Colonels won only four of their final 17 games and finished the season with an overall mark of 23-31, including 12-12 in Ohio Valley Conference action.

Eastern won one of three games in the post-season OVC tournament to finish in a tie for fifth place.

"It was a disappointing weekend," Coach Jane Worthington said. "We didn't play terribly, but we didn't play well enough to win, either."

Four Colonel players made the All-Ohio Valley Conference team: Kim Sarrazin, first team; Amy DeSmet (for the third consecutive year), second team; Lisa Edwards, second team; and Kristina Mahon, honorable mention.

DeSmet set Eastern records for most career games played (213) and most at-bats (665).

Pitcher Karen Scott also left her mark in the EKU record book for games (105), complete games (57), innings (546.1), victories (39) and ERA (2.19).

Scott, DeSmet, Nikki Wood and Jill MacDonald graduated.

Eastern Men's Golf Team Takes 4th in OVC Tourney

The EKU men's golf team led the Ohio Valley Conference Golf Tournament after two rounds, but finished fourth in the field.

"We were right there going into that final round, but just couldn't pull it off," said Coach Pat Stephens. "Overall, it was a disappointing spring. We didn't play up to our ability as a team. We seemed to have trouble bringing in that third and fourth man's score in every tourney we played.

"I was happy that our two seniors (Mason Guy and Andy Games) put together a good OVC tournament. We'll miss them next year, but we have several of our top golfers returning. We're looking forward to the fall season and getting back after it."

Junior Eric Willenbrink led the Colonels with his fourth-place finish of 215. Willenbrink was one of two unanimous choices for the All-OVC Team for his regular season play and also was selected for the All-OVC Tournament

Third in OVC

Tourney Performance Fails to Reflect "Great Spring"

"a great spring," according to Coach Joni Stephens, "even though our OVC championship performance didn't reflect it."

Eastern took third in the league tournament, behind only Murray State and Tennessee Tech.

Playing in inclement weather on the first day, Eastern fell behind the leaders early. However, in the second and third rounds, EKU stepped up its play, trimming 20 strokes off its first-round score on

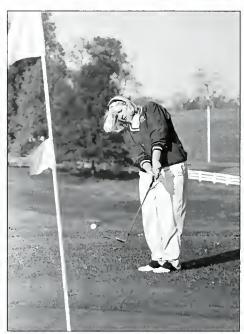

The women's golf team enjoyed the second day and nine strokes off its second-round performance the third day.

> Sophomore Heather Fasey of Frankfort led Eastern with her overall score of 254, which tied her for ninth place. Junior Michelle Biro was right behind in 10th place with her score of 255.

> Rounding out Eastern's contingent were sophomore Colleen Yaeger in 11th place at 256, junior Krissie Kirby for 12th at 257 and senior Julie Bourne tied for 16th at 260.

Strong Finish

Tennis Teams Conclude with Good Tourney Showing

The EKU men's and women's tennis teams saved their best for the Ohio Valley Conference Tournament.

Both teams were seeded eighth in the tournament, but came away with sixth-place finishes. The men's team finished with a 3-18 overall record, while the women's squad closed at 7-12.

"The teams worked hard all season and gave their best effort at each competition we've had this year," said Coach Tom Higgins.

In the first round of the men's tournament, EKU fell to Middle Tennessee 4-0. The men then defeated Austin Peay 4-3 but fell to Morehead 4-1 in the final round. Senior Michael Hornback, at No. 5 singles, had the only win for the Colonels in the final.

The Lady Colonels also fell to Middle 5-2, beat Austin Peay 5-3 and fell to Eastern Illinois 5-4. EKU dominated in doubles competition, taking all three matches against EIU. Freshman Susan Ferguson took a win for Eastern at No. 1 singles 6-3, 6-1.

Running for Titles

Women's Track, Cross Country Teams Champs

It's getting to be a habit, but not one the women's track and cross country teams want to break.

The women's teams again claimed Ohio Valley Conference indoor and outdoor track and cross country championships in 1998-99, while the men's cross country and indoor and outdoor track teams finished second, fourth and fifth, respectively.

For the women's cross country team, it was the 17th consecutive league title. Eastern was led by GTE Academic All-American Sarah Blossom's second-place finish of 18:42.97. Other EKU runners in the top 10 were Theresa Olsen, sixth; Jenni Brown, seventh; Heather Davel, eighth, and Hannah Benjamin, ninth.

Daniel Koech of the men's team won the individual championship, but it wasn't enough to propel the Colonel runners past champion Eastern Illinois.

In the indoor track championships, junior Lystra Bartholomew led Eastern with a first-place finish in the 55-meter hurdles. Teammate Kenyetta Grigsby took second in the event. Blossom took second in the 5,000-meter run.

David Machungo led the EKU men with second-place indoor finishes in the 3000-meter run and 5000-meter run.

For the champion women's outdoor track team, first-place finishers were discus thrower Kathy Dodsworth, Lystra Bartholomew in the 100-meter hurdles and Jamie King in the 1500-meter run and 3000-meter run.

For the men, Mohammed Khayr won the men's 10,000-meter run, Machungo took the 5,000-meter run and Daniel Blochwitz, a GTE Academic All-District pick, captured the 400-meter hurdles.

Tailgate Time

Pre-Game Festivities Add to Game Atmosphere

Tailgate parties have long been a cherished custom prior to EKU football games.

Many Colonel fans would arrive well before game time and get together with family and friends to try out their latest barbecue strategies and talk football.

In the fall of 1998, however, the timehonored tradition was given a shot of fresh energy and truly became a University-wide celebration and much more than just hundreds of individual cookouts.

Every pre-game event carried a special theme this year. Salutes were given to the community, Alumni annual Fund donors, Eastern alumni, parents of EKU students, education and industry leaders and University employees.

Each tailgate party consisted of a buffet line under a tent, entertainment from the Marching Colonels and other groups and a pre-game visit from the Colonel football team.

Long Jump

Athletics Program Makes Strides Under New A.D.

It was a busy first year for Jeff Long, Eastern's first full-time athletics director since Don Combs retired in 1990.

Well, technically it wasn't a full year — Long came on board in December — but he worked double-time to address what he called "years of eroding support."

Long, who previously served 10 years as an athletics administrator at the University of Michigan and as an associate director of athletics at Virginia Tech, outlined much of his vision for the University's athletics program at a February retreat of the Board of Regents.

One of his more intriguing proposals is to replace the existing football scoreboard with one that included an electronic message board on the other side.

"Forty thousand cars go by there a day," Long said. "You can tell those people about campus events though a scoreboard."

At its April 24 meeting, the Board of Regents enhanced the intercollegiate athletics budget by providing additional opportunities for EKU student-athletes, increased funding to meet student-athletes' medical expenses, a locker room for the women's track team and increased recruiting and travel funds.

It also was announced that the EKU cheerleaders and mascot would receive $500 per semester scholarships. Funding also was provided to hire a cheerleading coach, purchase uniforms and equip-the-art scoreboard with video replay capability.

"The new scoreboard will not only inform, but it will also entertain, helping to create a fun and exciting atmosphere that will draw students and other fans to Kidd Stadium."

The changes are just a part of Long's plan to make Eastern athletic events the first entertainment option for students and area residents.

And his approach isn't limited to football and men's basketball. A "Grand Slam the Stands" for the Eastern-Western Kentucky baseball game April 8 featured prizes and contests, including a World Wrestling Federation Pay-Per-View special giveaway.

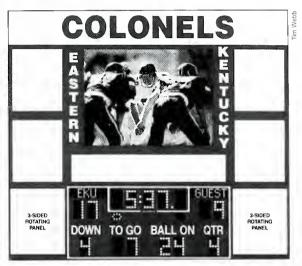

"It's moré than just a game," Long said. "It's a happening."

Step Forward

New Building Opens on Campus

A $4.75 million Wellness and Conditioning

Building opened in the fall of 1999.

The 40,000-square-foot facility, located north of the Begley Building, serves the University's health education, physical education, and recreation programs as well as EKU's student athletes. It houses a physical activity area that also serves as a lab for physical education activities, and athletic training facility for intercollegiate athletics, strength and weight development area, wellness area, three classrooms, computer lab, exercise physiology lab and offices for faculty and football coaches.

Funding for the new building came from a $4 million state appropriation and a successful "Competitive Edge" campaign that raised over $750,000 in private gifts.

The facility provides a large activity teaching area to augment the preparation of K-12 physical education teachers and a wellness area that serves a s a laboratory for training students to perform lifestyle assessments and assist others in the development of individualized health improvement programs.

The new physiology lab is expected to boost research and teaching opportunities.

The new state-of-the-art athletic training area serves in the treatment and rehabilitation for athletic injuries and enable Eastern to continue its highly-regarded athletic training program.

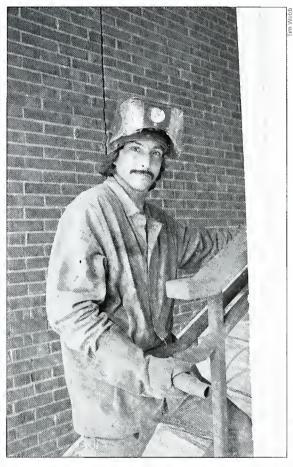

EKU fields 16 intercollegiate athletic teams, eight each for men and women.

Workers put the finishing touches on the new Wellness and Conditioning Building, which opened in the fall of 1999.

Road to Glory

King, Blossom Close Outstanding Careers

Two of EKU's most storied women's track/cross country careers came to a close this spring when Jamie King and Sarah Blossom laced up their running shoes for the last time at Eastern.

Characteristically, they went out in high style.

For the fourth time, King was named and NCAA Division I Track All-American. But the honor didn't come without adversity.

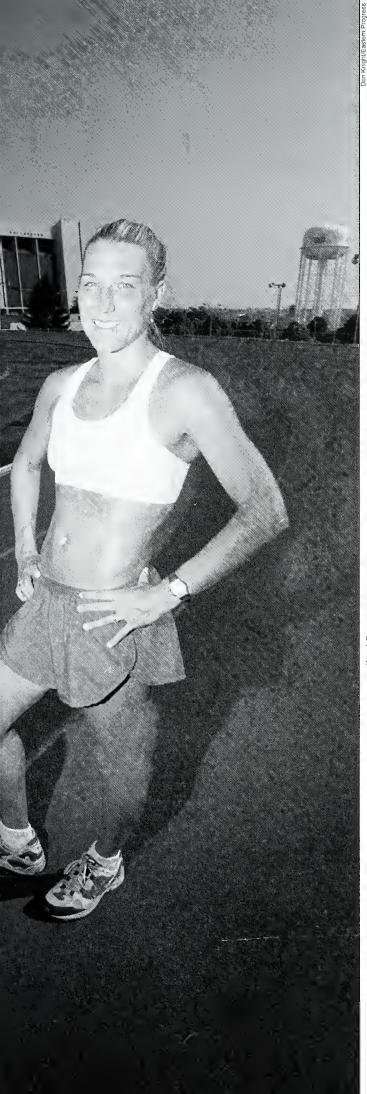

Just into the first of four laps into the finals at the Outdoor Track and Field Championships, King's right shoe was knocked from her foot. Despite the setback, she went on to finish seventh in a field of 14.

"This was just an awesome show of courage and dedication," said her coach, Rick Erdmann. "I think most people would have just given in to the pain and discomfort, but not Jaime."

King, of Botkins, Ohio, was a six time winner of the Ohio Valley Conference Female Athlete of the Year Award in the sports of cross country, indoor track and outdoor track two occasions each. She has the second fastest all-time 1,500-meter run in school history at 4:17.76.

Blossom, who played a leading role in four consecutive cross country championships for Eastern, received one of the Ohio Valley Conference's highest honors when she claimed the OVC Scholar-Athlete Award for 1998-99.

The former OVC Female Runner of the Year has won three conference titles and was the first individual ever to win three times in the 10,000 meter race at the OVC Outdoor Track Championship.

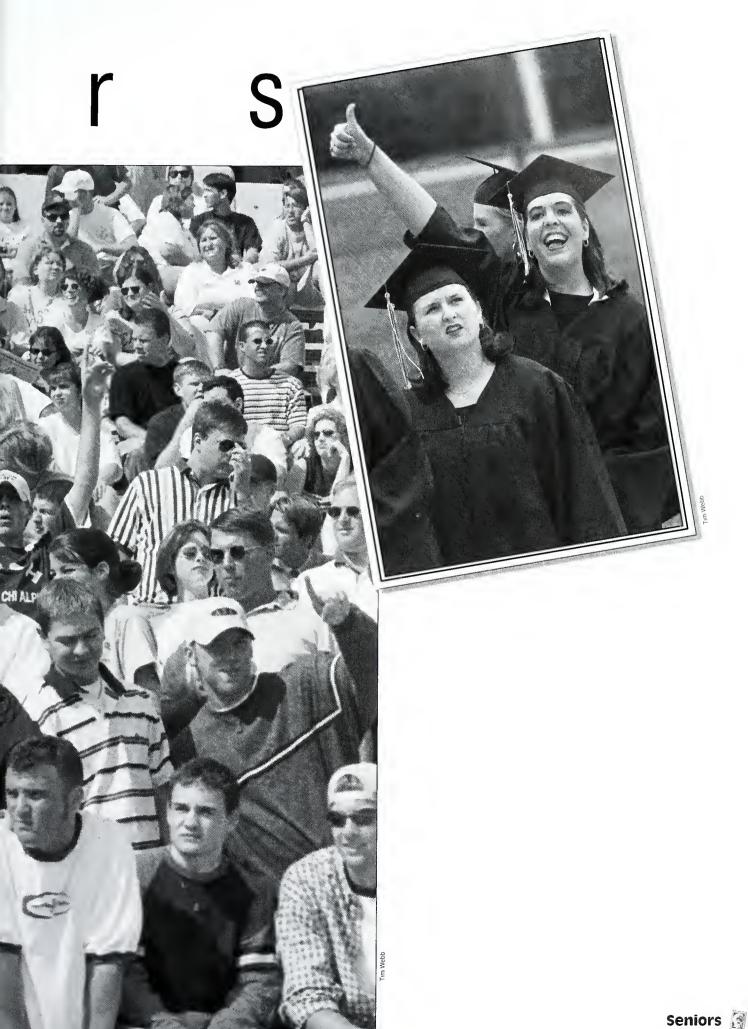

Blossom, of Indianapolis, Ind., also earned a 4.0 GPA in occupational therapy, earning the OVC Academic Medal of Honor several times and GTE Academic All-American honors in 1997.

"Sarah exhibits all the positive aspects of a student-athlete," Erdmann said.

1998-99 Around Our World in Pictures

Newspapers around the would carried the shocking news: Clinton Impeached. The president was not, however, removed from office. At left are two of the major players in the saga: Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr and the young woman with whom Clinton had an affair, Monica Lewinsky. At right: unidentified young women leave Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo, where two student gunmen went on a shooting rampage, killing 2S.

A Century of Service to Students and the Commonwealth

Twenty-seven years after the creation of Central University, 1935 Walters Collegiate Institute was founded, keeping development of higher education in Richmond uninterrupted.

March 21, the law establishing the Eastern Kentucky State fifth president. 1906 Normal School was signed by Gov. J.C.W. Beckham.

1906 June 2, Ruric Nevel Roark was named the first president.

1909 Upon the April 10 death of her husband, Mary C. Roark was named acting president.

April 10. John Grant Crabbe was elected the second 1910 president.

1916 September 7. Thomas Jackson Coates assumed the office as the third president.

Eastern became a four-year institution known as the Eastern Kentucky State Normal School and Teachers College 1925 The first four-year degrees were awarded.

1928 June 1, Herman Lee Donovan became the fourth president.

1930 The Eastern Kentucky State Normal School and Teachers College was renamed Eastern Kentucky State Teachers College.

The graduate program was begun, leading to the Master of Arts in Education.

July 1. William Francis O'Donnell assumed the office as the 1941

The Kentucky General Assembly removed the word "Teachers" from the name of the College and gave the right to award non-professional degrees.

1960 July 1. Robert R. Martin assumed office as the sixth president.

1966 February 26, Gov. Edward T. Breathitt signed into law a bill redesignating Eastern Kentucky University.

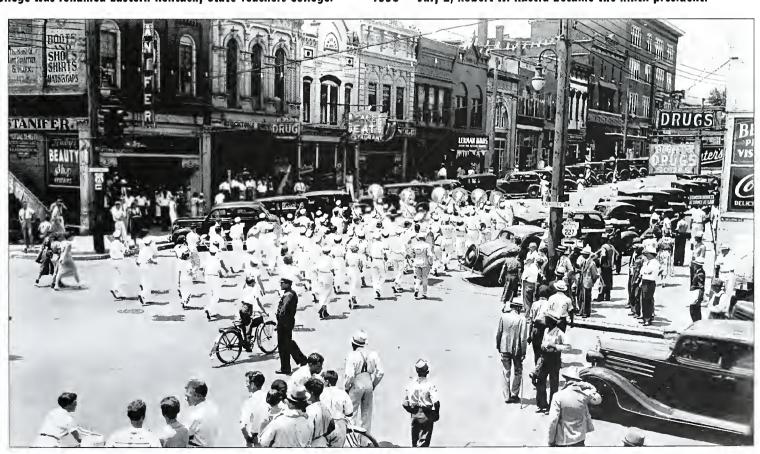

July 1, Eastern Kentucky State College became Eastern Kentucky University.

1974 The Centennial Year of Higher Education was observed.

1975 October 1, J.C. Powell was named the seventh president.

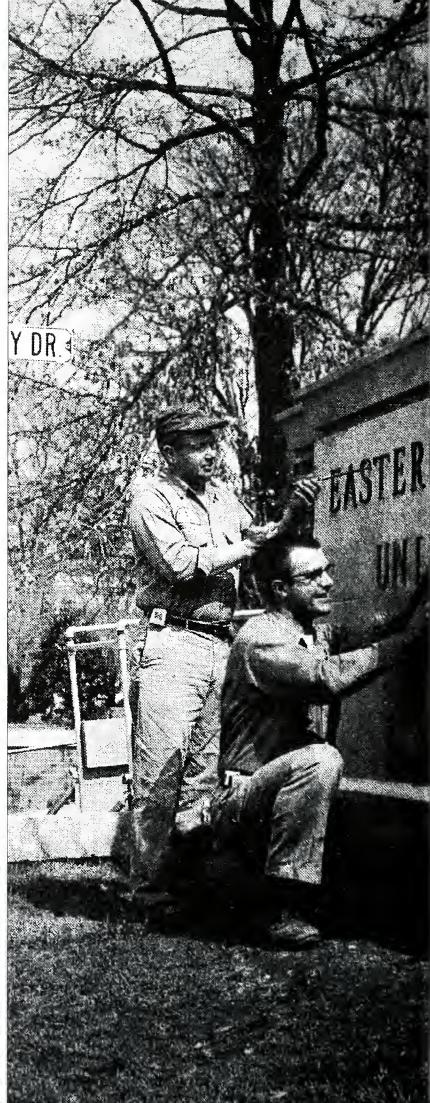

1985 January 1, Hanly Funderburk assumed office as the eighth president.

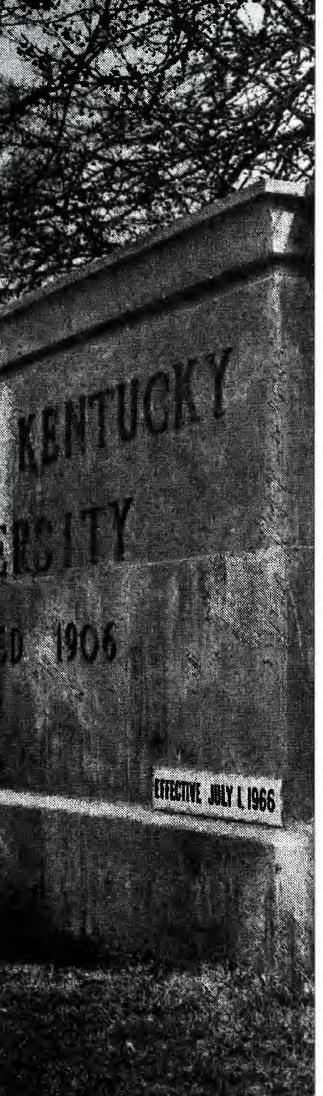

1998 July 2, Robert W. Kustra became the ninth president.

Clockwise from above: U.S. Vice President Lyndon Johnson and Eastern President Robert Martin led the delegation of dignitaries at groundbreaking ceremonies in 1961 for Alumni Coliseum; workmen putting finishing touches on a sign proudly proclaiming University status, which was granted in 1966, students dancing in the Keen Johnson building, circa 1950; former Eastern football player Harvey Yeary went on to achieve acclaim as actor Lee Majors.

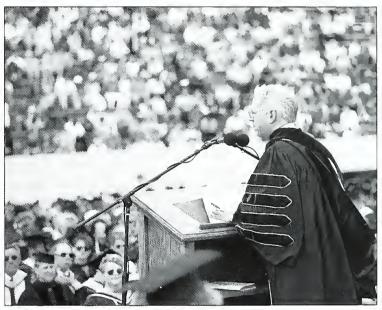

Clockwise from top left: Eastern's 1992 First Family includes President Hanly Funderburk, grandson Hanly Paul, daughter-in-law Debbie, son Ken, Mrs. Funderburk, daughter Debbie Dahl and granddaughter Ashley Dahl; Eastern's football Colonels, led by Coach Roy Kidd, won the first of two Division I-AA national titles in 1979; President Funderburk addresses a media conference flanked by presidents of Kentucky's other universities in support of Governor Patton's higher education reform plans; President Bob Kustra speaks at the spring 1999 commencement; Andy Harnack was among campus leaders in presenting on-line classes beginning in 1998.
